Staircase Measurement Form: Measurements

It's best to perform all measurements and counts twice for accuracy. Also, be careful that your tape measure doesn't bend between stairs.

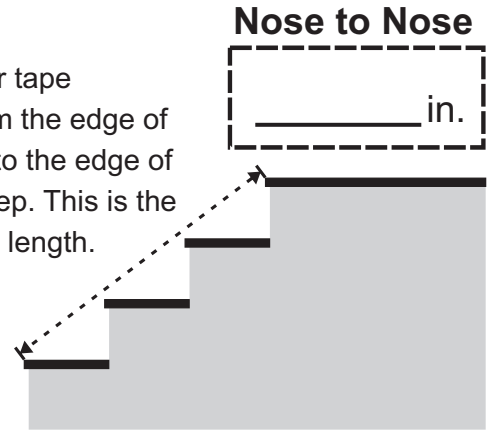

Step 1

Measure from the edge of your top stair in a straight line across the stairs to the floor as shown. This is the overall stair length.

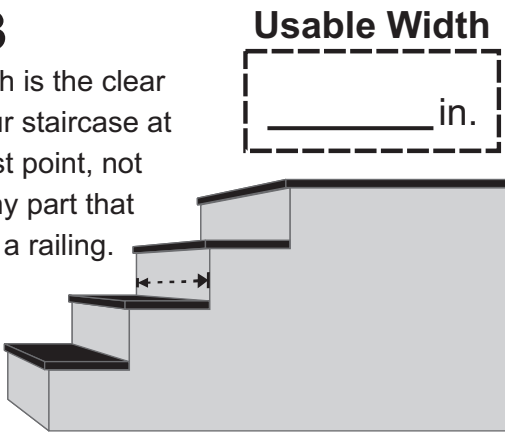

Step 2

Now run your tape measure from the edge of the top step to the edge of the lowest step. This is the nose to nose length.

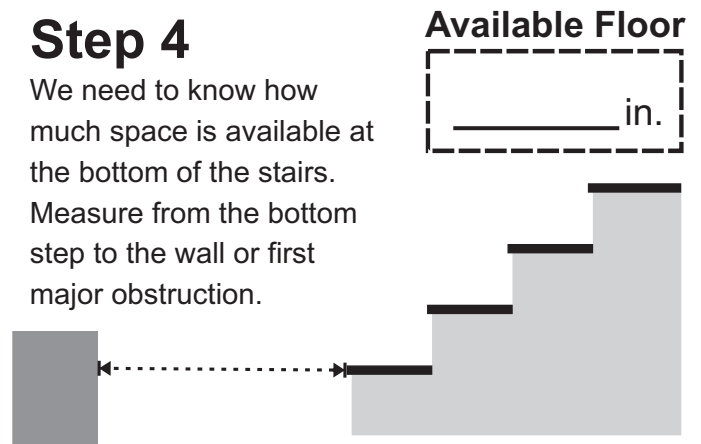

Step 3

Usable width is the clear width of your staircase at its narrowest point, not including any part that lies beyond a railing.

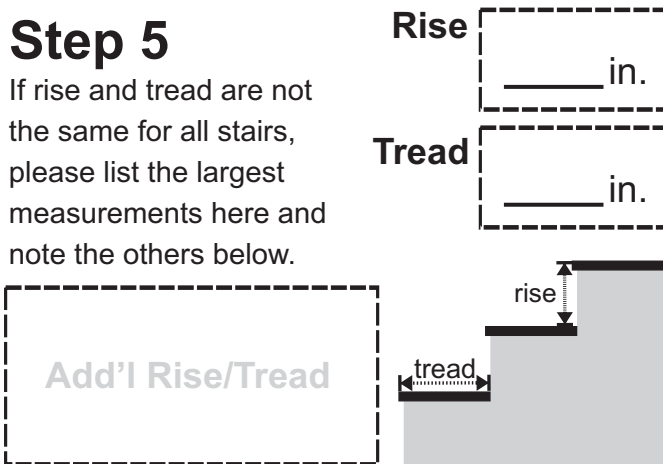

Step 4

We need to know how much space is available at the bottom of the stairs. Measure from the bottom step to the wall or first major obstruction.

Step 5

If rise and tread are not the same for all stairs, please list the largest measurements here and note the others below.

Step 6

A few more simple questions and we're done. The number of risers will equal the number of steps, not including the bottom landing but including the top stair.
